

Woven Woods for Windows

Are you tired of looking at horizontal blind products but don't know what others alternatives are in the window covering arena? Consider woven woods the next time you are in the window covering market.

Some of you might remember the orange and olive green yarned woods in the seventies but they have come a long way. The character and personality of woven woods keep them as a favorite window covering product.

People love their natural character and the warmth and texture they bring to the room. Woven woods seem to bridge a gap between the indoors and outdoors by bringing a touch of nature inside the home which in turn creates a feeling of peacefulness and harmony in your space. Since no two woven woods are alike, they bring a naturalness to your home that few window coverings possess.

Woven woods may be used by themselves as a window covering or may be enhanced with a fabric valance or fabric side panels which will hang from wood or iron rods.

When selecting woven woods for your chosen window covering you must be aware of the pros and cons of this natural product.

Pros

- Woven woods are beautiful and natural to view.
- You may choose the natural shades in all stains and patterns to accommodate you current furnishings.
- Woven woods may be easily installed.
- No other products can substitute the look. They are naturally beautiful.

Cons

- Woven woods are a natural material so direct sun can shorten their life span.
- Some woven woods have no privacy. When choosing woven woods for your home, make sure you take the actual sample out of the book and hold it up to the window.
- The sides of softer woven woods make have a tendency to fray if they are used on a real regular basis. Be practical when choosing the pattern.

Remember, these are natural products. If you like everything the same, this product might irritate you. There is a broad range of woven woods in the market. Everything from ready made quality (off the shelf) to high-end top quality furnishings. There is a woven wood product for every client's budget.

A professional can assist you in helping you choose a product that serves its purpose with little maintenance. He or she will spot any concerns that might occur for a satisfactory installation. The woven woods need to enhance the space but still must be practical. Like any other decision in the home, consulting a professional saves a lot of time and money in the long run.

* * *